

Put your targets out of sight and shoot holes in them

When I was 16 and living in Australia, I noticed a statement that was pinned to a wall at my girlfriend's home and at that time it made a profound impression on my life. The girlfriend is long gone, but not the change in my life the statement made. It read; "Put your targets out of sight ... and shoot holes in them". It implied that you should set targets in your life. BIG targets! Targets that were almost impossible to achieve. As Zig Ziglar says; "If you are going to set goals, set big goals!"

So, I did what most people do, I started to build a life of achievement, setting big targets ... and shooting holes in them. I achieved success! There is no magic formula, just dream big, get a crystal-clear vision, set it as a target, and work your butt off until you achieve it. Then go bigger again.

However, after some decades, I realized that this is so self-centered. We amass as much as possible to live a comfortable life, but many like to use their success as pride trips, to demonstrate to the world they have "made it". The biggest house, car, watch, bank account, prestige address, we use them as tools to fulfill our own desires.

My Reinvention

I had "made it". Published business author, keynote speaker, International consultant and clients in four countries. Or had I? Even as I write this I have been reading about top fashion designers committing suicide, unhappy broken lives of wealthy people and a general deep depression in our society. I had reached a point in my life that there had to be something more, and found that fulfillment in helping others. I founded Global Flying Hospitals in 2001 and set off to create this humanitarian medical charity, with the intentions of providing medical treatment to the suffering people in developing countries. When I discovered there are 25,000 children die every day, including today, because they do not receive any medical treatment ... or when I learned of the 2 billion people with no access to medical care and have miserable existences, I had hit my eureka. I knew in my knower that this was my new target ... to once again, shoot holes in. And the one that will give me the most satisfaction in my life. I reinvented my life, formed the charity and set my targets out of site. Even contemplating refurbishing a Boeing 747 into a Teaching Hospital was an impossible target. Or was it? We are now hitting bull's eyes.

Your Reinvention

You will see mention of a new fundraising program called The Sundance King. This has come at the most opportune time. We have gifted to America the Health 4 America initiative. No, the USA is not the developing world ... but it has taken a big hit. That wonderful country which has helped the world, from overcoming tyranny and saving millions in the 2nd World War, to igniting massive growth in many countries, from sharing great inventions to giving us all great ideas and motivation ... is now struggling to provide healthcare for its own people. Our Health 4 America is an out-of-sight target, yet we are readying to shoot holes in it, as we launch over 20 city, 3 and 4 day mega-event medical clinics, to provide FREE healthcare to the uninsured and under-insured people in very dire straits.

This can be your reinvention. Perhaps you may want to do something that makes a difference? Perhaps you are tired of seeing our world spiral down, even great countries like the USA facing serious hurt. Or wanting to help little suffering children in other countries regain health. I have read all the motivation books, listened to all the feel good speakers and learned many things in my many decades on our planet ... so I can tell you, if you truly want change in your life, reach out and start helping others. It will change your life and put you on a forward path of achievement.

Perhaps you also want to learn how to put your targets out of sight and shoot holes in them? Or maybe become part of Global Flying Hospitals and grow with us? If so, send a message to: info@globalflyinghospitals.org and say: I want to become a GFH Global Partner.

Thank you

Neill Newton
Chairman and Founder
Global Flying Hospitals